Humans of New York is a photoblog that captures the stories of everyday people in New York City. The blog has been running for over 10 years and has amassed a huge following on social media. The stories are often heartwarming, inspiring, and sometimes even heartbreaking, but they always offer a glimpse into the lives of people we might otherwise never meet.

The blog was started by Brandon Stanton in 2010. Stanton was working as a photographer in New York City when he began taking photos of people on the street and asking them to share their stories. He then posted the photos and stories on his blog, and the project quickly gained popularity.

Today, Humans of New York has over 20 million followers on Facebook and over 9 million followers on Instagram. The blog has also been featured in several books, including "Humans of New York" (2013), "Humans of New York: Stories" (2015), and "Humans of New York: Hometown Heroes" (2020).

What Makes Humans of New York So Special?

There are many things that make Humans of New York so special. First, the stories are always authentic. Stanton does not edit or embellish the stories that people tell him. He simply shares them as they are, which gives them a powerful impact.

Second, the stories are often very personal. Stanton does not shy away from difficult topics, such as poverty, homelessness, and addiction. He also shares stories of joy, love, and hope. As a result, Humans of New York offers a well-rounded view of the human experience.

Third, the photos are beautiful. Stanton is a talented photographer, and his photos capture the beauty of everyday people. He often photographs people in their natural surroundings, which helps to create a sense of intimacy and connection.

Finally, Humans of New York is a community. Stanton has created a space where people can share their stories and connect with others. The blog's followers are passionate about the project, and they often share their own stories and offer support to others.

Some of the Most Memorable Humans of New York Stories

Over the years, Humans of New York has shared thousands of stories. Here are a few of the most memorable:

- The story of Mike, a homeless man who was living in a tent in Central Park. Mike had been homeless for over a year, but he never lost his hope. He eventually got back on his feet and found a home.
- The story of Sarah, a young woman who was diagnosed with cancer. Sarah was given only a few months to live, but she refused to give up. She fought her cancer with everything she had, and she eventually beat it.
- The story of Ahmed, a Syrian refugee who came to New York City with his family. Ahmed and his family had lost everything in the war, but they were determined to rebuild their lives. They eventually found a home and a new community in New York City.

These are just a few of the many inspiring stories that have been shared on Humans of New York. The blog is a reminder that everyone has a story to tell, and that we should all be more open to listening to each other.
